A Message from the Director

The quote on the back of our Addams Family Musical shirt this year comes from the opening song 'When You're an Addams.' The quote reads 'It's Family first, and Family last, and Family by and by.' And that is exactly what I see when I walk into a theatre class or a musical rehearsal. The theatre is a family and these students honestly love each other. Don't get me wrong; I'm not saying we always get along, or that we always like each other. My wife is fond of reminding me that like and love are two different things. She sometimes tells me 'I will always love you, I don't like you very much right now.'

For me, I think it was that feeling of family that first drew me to working in the theatre. Theatre attracts some of the most amazing people from so many different walks of life. We get the artists...the oddballs...the square pegs that struggle to find a place to fit. But in the theatre, we not only accept that weirdness, we embrace it. We are a family of black sheep...and blue sheep...and purple sheep...and rainbow sheep. In the theatre, we find two extremely important things: a place where we can be unique and individual and a place where we belong.

Having been a teacher for almost fifteen years now (God, have I really been here that long?), I see how important it is for students to have a place to belong. Even after these students have moved on to bigger and better things, they will always have a place to come to feel that sense of belonging...they will always have a home.

This show tackles the issues, disagreements, and conflicts that can come up within a family. We see Morticia struggle to accept the young man that Wednesday falls in love with. We see Alice and Mal fighting to find the spark in their relationship after years of marriage. We see Pugsley worry about losing his best friend. And we watch Gomez realize that his little girl isn't so little anymore, as he sings to Wednesday 'Let's be happy, forever happy, and a tiny bit sad.'

The family that is built here on stage and behind the scenes extends beyond the theatre, beyond this show, and beyond graduation. As I watch each generation of students grow and learn, I can't help but feel a little like Gomez in that song. If I do my job well, my students will be prepared to go out into the world and tackle whatever life throws at them. And with the happiness that comes with seeing them succeed, there is also the 'tiny bit' of sad of seeing them take that next step. It is my hope that the theatre always feels like a home, and that they know that these doors are always open to them.
